Our aim is to make getting a dyslexia assessment and understanding the outcome, as straightforward as possible. We choose to promote Dyslexia as a 'difference' rather than a deficit or a disability and we try to empower those identified with a Specific Learning Difference. We work hard to make your dyslexia assessment a positive experience with a lasting impact. We use the assessment process to empower people to achieve their full potential by identifying strengths and strategies to help overcome areas of challenge. Conducting a diagnostic assessment is a big responsibility and not one that we take lightly at Hull Dyslexia. A diagnosis of a Specific Learning Difference (SpLD) can answer so many questions and pave the way for someone to reach their full potential.

E-safety

The internet is an excellent tool for learning, especially for children and young people who are experiencing education in an environment outside of the classroom. However, it is essential that sites accessed by the child are checked by an adult on a regular basis. The main reason for this is to protect the young person from undesirable materials, but it is also necessary to make sure the sites content is relevant to the young person's needs. Further advice regarding e-safety can be found below.

<https://www.hullscp.co.uk/> - Hull Safeguarding Children's Partnership

<https://notinourcommunity.org/> - Website where parents, schools and young people can select short films, cartoons and chats about keeping safe at an age-appropriate level on things as wide ranging as County Lines, Online safety, grooming etc.

Accreditation

Although there is no requirement for you to enter your child for any tests or examinations, for secondary school aged children, you may wish to consider their need for qualifications, for example at GCSE, IGCSE or GNVQ part one. About half of sixteen-year-olds are expected to gain 5 or more GCSEs at A-C grades. If they do not get qualifications at 16, it is possible to complete an access course at college to catch up. The current financial responsibility for home-educated children has not changed, namely, that parents who choose to electively home educate their children assume financial responsibility for their education. Below is a list of links for accreditation should you wish to pursue.

Another enriched learning experience in Hull city centre is the famous Fish Trail. This unique piece of public art sees explorers search for 41 fish across the city centre, taking in the picturesque Old Town and thriving Fruit Market. The trail starts just outside the City Hall Ticket office, where you can collect a map, and finishes at the top of Whitefriargate. If you're successful in scouting out all the fish, then make sure to head back to City Hall to collect a certificate. www.visit Hull.org/to-do/fish-trail/

Community Sports/Leisure Activities

Keeping your child fit, healthy and active plays a huge role in their social, emotional wellbeing. This gives them the opportunity to be amongst peers, develop friendships and interact with others. This may come in the form of a sports club, individual sport or enjoying the local parks. A list of leisure centres can be found here www.hcandl.co.uk/ If you would like any information regarding local sports clubs please ask your access and inclusion officer.
